

PSYC 509. DIVERSE CLINICAL POPULATIONS.

Credits: 3

Offered by: Psychology (Faculty of Science)

This course is not offered this catalogue year.

Description

Poverty is a significant risk factor for psychological disorder. In this class, we will examine critically research focused on this association, with an emphasis on (a) mechanisms underlying the link between poverty and psychopathology, and (b) development and dissemination of evidence-based treatments for individuals living in poverty. Particular attention will be paid to the research methodologies used to address these questions.
